The affair occurred in the city at the Governor's mansion. A convict force of forty had just been marched to the spot, and as they entered the enclosure four of them made a break for liberty. The guards at once began firing, and the discharge of Winehester riftes was rapid. One convict (William Hart, of Granville,) was shot before he had gone thirty yards. Three balls struck him. Bart, of Granville,) was shot before he had gone thirty yards. Three balls struck him, one smashing his leg at the knee, another passing through his arm, and a third through his shoulder. He fell in the street. The guard fired at Lewis Raiford, of Johnston, another negro convict, at long range, the ball passing through his thigh. One of the convicts was captured, and only one escaped. The latter's name is Rufus Ferd, and he is colored. A large crowd of peoand he is colored. A large crowd of peo-ple quickly gathered at the scene of the shooting. Hart was taken to the peniten-tiary, where his leg was amputated. His injuries are serious. Many shots were fired at these prisoners, and the bullets struck several houses, causing much alarm. A Converted Lawyer.

A Columbia (8. C.) special says: Columbia is experiencing a riligious sensation of the first water. Walter S. Montieth, a talented and prominent lawyer of this city, who has for years led a most ungodly life and taken no pains to conceal his wickedness, began to mend his ways about eight months ago. He first astonished his companions in sin by suddenly cutting loose from them, and soon afterwards he gave up all his bad habits and formally professed religion. Since then he has been a frequent speaker at and leader of religious meetings, and last week, after standing a searching and creditable examination before the Quarterly District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, he was licensed to preach and expound the Gospel. Last night he made his first appearance in the pulpit at the Marion-Street Methodist church, where he preached to a crowded congregation, representing all classes and denominations, conspicuous among whom were many gamblers, sporting mes, and others of his crstwhile friends. His text was I. Samuel, xxi., S. The subject was treated in a masterly and eloquent manner, and the neophyte's first efforts won unstinted encomiums from the several clersymen present. Mr. Montieth is about forfly-six years old. He is one of the bestread lawyers in the State, and enjoys an extensive practice, but it is his intention to give up the law after the 1st of next January, and thenceforth devote his talents to the regular work of the ministry. It is believed that he will soon develop into a re-

The statue is the work of Valentine, the Richmend seniptor, and represents Mr. Breckinridge in the act of making a speech. The bearing is erect and im-posing, the head is holdly and strongly modelled, and the face is full of expression. Virginia would do well to give the com-mission for the Lee statue at Pichmond to Mr. Valentine, whose recumbent figure of Lee for the Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Va., showed his great ability
